

Web Privacy Policy

Privacy of each individual visiting our site is a matter of great concern for us. We believe that it is important that as a web user you are made aware of the kind of exposure that you may face during your effort to gain knowledge. We do not utilize information from you for business, personal, or marketing purposes. We believe it is important you know how we treat the information about you we receive on the Internet.

You can visit most portions of our web site without revealing to us who you are or revealing any information about yourself. Our web servers collect the domain names, not the e-mail addresses, of visitors. This information is occasionally tabulated to perform trend analysis and measurement of various statistical information but is never released. Sometimes, you might be asked to enter an email address or other information in a form. Unless prominently and specifically stated otherwise, this information is never shared outside of OISSG.

As Site Owner we do not endorse, guarantee, warrant, or recommend any products or services advertised on the Site, linked from the Site, or provided by our Sponsors.

We strongly supports full disclosure on items we add to the site. With our position in the computer security community, we are obligated to release pertinent information in a timely fashion to raise awareness. A lot of files that are added to our archives are the personal work of individuals who contribute to the site. Because of this, we respect their views and we do not censor or edit anything added to the site. We do add many files that are perceived by some as detrimental to the Internet as a whole, however, we feel that in order to make people aware of a problem that needs to be remedied, they first must understand what the problem is; thus, full disclosure.
